Rep. Stewart secures critical funding for Utah

WASHINGTON — This year, Rep. Chris Stewart (R-UT) secured critical funding for Utah through his role on the House Committee on Appropriations. This committee — comprised of 33 Democrats and 26 Republicans — is responsible for funding the federal government's vital activities to keep the United States safe, strong, and moving forward.

"It is a great responsibility to serve on such a powerful committee," said Rep. Stewart. "Utah hasn't had an appropriator in Congress for more than 40 years, and it's my honor to ensure our great state's projects and priorities are funded. It's also never been more important to control the purse strings of our federal government, and I will continue fighting to do just that."

"President Biden continues to recklessly spend taxpayer money, and Americans continue to suffer the consequences of record-high inflation — especially those who can least afford it. Progressive economic policies are crushing low-wage workers, and it's our committee's duty to change course. We need to start sensibly allocating funds that create

UTAH LEGISLATIVE UPDATE

I want to thank each of you for your support in the Primary Election. As of June 30, 2022, it indicates I have just over 70 percent of the popular vote. Campaigning is rewarding as well as hard work, and I so appreciate each of you for helping the campaign, studying out the candidates, and importantly, casting your informed vote. Thank you! If you'd like to see the primary election results, visit: <https://electionresults.utah.gov/elections/>

I wish all of you a safe and happy Fourth of July as you celebrate the founding of this great country. I'm so very proud to be an American and my heart is filled with gratitude and joy to have the opportunities and freedoms we have. As President Eisenhower said below, we must earn this privilege daily. I hope each one of us commit ourselves to protecting this great nation and our democracy as the greatest nation that has ever been. Happy Independence Day!

"Freedom has its life in the hearts, the actions, the spirit of men and so it must be daily earned and refreshed – else like a flower cut from its life-giving roots, it will wither and die." – Dwight D. Eisenhower

Survey Questions:

When the Legislature is not in session, we convene at the Capitol once a month to participate in interim meetings and hear from members of the public on various topics. It is extremely helpful to me when those of you I represent participate and give me input during these sessions, so I have created a brief survey to ask about your participation and/or your comfort level in doing so. There are 3 questions that I am asking in this survey:

#1: Do you know how to participate in interim meetings?

#2: If yes, do you feel comfortable participating? (scale 1-10)

#3: If you have participated before, has it been online or in-person?

Wildfire Prevention and Safety

As we once again enter wildfire season, we need everyone's help to prevent fires. Currently, 99% of the state is in severe drought conditions, and 80% is in extreme or exceptional drought conditions. However, last year, despite the historic drought, we experienced 922 fewer human-caused wildfires than in 2020, a 50% reduction. Utahns showed they could make a difference in preventing wildfires by practicing responsible fire safety measures. This year, we need to continue to be extremely cautious to preserve our beautiful state. We can all prevent fires by properly extinguishing campfires, securing trailer chains to make sure it doesn't drag, not parking vehicles in dry grass and maintaining trailers and RVs.

As you celebrate with family and loved ones, please be especially safe with fireworks. This includes using fireworks only during legal times and days, keeping a fire extinguisher and water nearby and using fireworks away from dry grass. Sensitive Materials in Schools

Nationwide, children have increased access to pornography, posing severe risks to their health and development. To protect our children from this dangerous matter, the Legislature passed H.B. 374 Sensitive Materials in Schools, which prohibits child access to pornographic or indecent instructional materials in school settings, including public school libraries. Local Education Agencies (LEAs) must take feedback from parents on whether instructional materials meet the appropriate standards.

The Attorney General's Office issued a memorandum to the Utah State Board of Education (USBE) regarding H.B. 374. As schools implement this bill, I encourage all parents to work with their LEAs to evaluate the materials our children can access.

Utah Manufacturing Modernization Grant

With recent worldwide supply chain issues, we have seen the need to lessen our dependence on manufacturing overseas and bring more manufacturing back to Utah. S.B. 212 Manufacturing Modernization Grant Program created a $10 million grant program to help local businesses maintain or develop manufacturing in the state. In 2020, manufacturing was the third-largest source of GDP in Utah. This program will support companies that are expanding automation and innovation, bringing jobs to Utah and contributing to our economy.

Congregate Care Facilities Updates

Congregate care is a kind of residential child care community and a residential treatment center that consists of 24-hour supervision for children in highly structured settings such as group homes, residential treatment facilities, or maternity homes. Such settings must be a licensed or approved home or facility that can take in 7-12 children, as seen in group homes, or 12 or more children, as seen in institutions. Fourteen is the average age of children who enter into congregate care.

Approximately 100 congregate care facilities in Utah provide residential treatment for youth with behavioral struggles. While these programs offer an important service to our communities, we must ensure the health and safety of children are being met. This year, to enhance guardrails in congregate care programs, we passed S.B. 239 Congregate Care Program Amendments, which requires programs to allow weekly confidential voice-to-voice communication between children and their families outside of traditional therapy. In this month's Political Subdivisions Interim Committee, we received reports that this critical opportunity for residents to maintain family relationships has been beneficial.

Water Recreation Safety Guidelines

Now that the weather is getting warmer, many people are starting to enjoy Utah's water recreation activities. As you use our state's lakes and rivers, it's important to remember a few life-saving safety measures.

1-Always wear a properly fitted life jacket.

2-Stay well-hydrated.

3-Review the Division of Outdoor Recreation's safety guidelines before going out on the water.

Please be safe this summer!

Thank you once again for your trust and support in this recent Primary election. I will continue to work extremely hard to best represent our area at the Utah Legislature, and ask for your continued support in the upcoming General Election this fall.

Sincerely, Evan

FROM THE EDITOR

The heat is on

While our neighbors to the south have a differing definition of hot during the summer months, Iron County citizens still feel the impact of increased temperatures. Because extreme heat is the cause for the highest number of deaths each year, it is crucial we keep cool. That includes our kids and pets, too! If you have access to the internet, you can find many ways to help fight the rays and avoid serious heat-related illnesses such as dehydration, heat exhaustion and heat stroke.

Here are a few:

Cover windows with drapes or shades.

Never leave people or pets in a closed car on a warm day.

Take cool showers or baths. Wear loose, lightweight, light-colored clothing. Drink plenty of fluids to stay hydrated.

Avoid high-energy activities or work outdoors, during midday heat, if possible. And please check on family members, seniors and neighbors.

Know the signs of heat-related illnesses and ways to respond. This usually involves heavy sweating, paleness, muscle cramps, tiredness, weakness, fast or weak pulse, dizziness, headache, fainting, nausea, vomiting. And if you do suspect heat stroke, call 911 or get to a hospital immediately. Cool down with whatever methods are available until medical help arrives. Do not give the person anything to drink.

Enjoy your summer and have fun in the sun, just be careful and listen to your body!

Freedom from captivity, control, confinement, etc.; power or right of doing, thinking, speaking, etc., according to choice.

There is another crucial lynchpin to acquiring liberty—protecting and maintaining it.

Those concerned with the current state of education in Utah could only shudder after reading a local newspaper last week. Students at one Utah university were "treated" to two different speakers on November 16. One speaker exemplified the soulful embodiment of everything our college students should aspire to achieve. And the other speaker, well, let's just say he was an embarrassment.

I was fortunate to hear Rev. Carl Wilkens in an appearance sponsored by the university's chapter of Amnesty International.

Sent as a missionary to Rwanda, Wilkens risked his life to shelter and feed children in an orphanage during the horrific 1994 genocide that killed 800,000 ethnic Tutsis.

"For me, there was no other choice," he said. "If you're going to live for others, for your fellowman, your life will be full of risk. But the bigger risk is living for yourself alone, because what kind of life is that?"

wealth and material goods. Real satisfaction comes not from a bank account, he said, but from service to others in need of help.

Wilkens spent the entire day speaking at multiple student gatherings. For his work, he was paid $900 – and his airplane fare wasn't included.

Oh yeah, and that other speaker...that same day the university wrote a check for $6,000 for an "important" lecture by actor Dennis Haskins whose only notable role was as the principal (Mr. Belding) in the TV sitcom "Saved by the Bell."

TO THE EDITOR

Whose Life and Liberty?

America is the land of the free, but my sense of freedom feels increasingly tenuous. Freedom means we may exercise our right of self-determination and pursue our aspirations without undue governmental restraint. It does not mean we get to do whatever we want, whenever we want, to whomever we want, without reasonable limitations of the social contract.

I have the natural right to be free from the ever-present threat that I or my loved ones may be shot or contract a deadly illness while buying groceries or attending school, yet unfettered access to assault weapons and people who refuse to follow public health directives have infringed on this right.

I have the natural right to plan my own child bearing, and to refuse to donate my body for the birth of a rapist's child, yet with the Supreme Court's lazy and brazenly disingenuous reasoning in overturning Roe, legislators are now free to assign me criminal charges if I dare to exercise these rights. Let freedom from government intrusion ring, indeed.

In a country with unparalleled resources and the most inspired civic foundations in the world, we carry the shameful distinction of having some of the highest rates of maternal mortality, COVID deaths, and gun deaths in the industrialized world. We cannot rightly claim to be a free and pro-life nation when faced with this truth.

To reconcile this disconnect, I suggest we examine our judgments about the lives we choose to protect. The Methodist Pastor Dave Barnhart distills it this way: "The unborn are a convenient group of people to advocate for... [T]hey are morally uncomplicated, unlike the incarcerated, addicted, or the chronically poor... unlike orphans, they don't need money, education, or childcare... You can love the unborn... without substantially challenging your own wealth, power, or privilege... They are, in short, the perfect people to love if you want to claim you love Jesus but actually dislike people who breathe."

I don't question the earnestness of those wishing to protect the unborn or the legitimacy of gun advocates' desire to defend themselves. I just ask that they reflect on the universality of the value of human life, and the flip side of freedom, which is responsibility. The definition of freedom that resonates with me is that one person's right to swing his fist ends at the other guy's nose. Well, there are a lot of bloodied noses out there, but we can prevent future bloody noses.

If politicians who rhapsodize about the rights of the unborn truly respect life and liberty, might I suggest that for every speech they make about it, they make a similar speech about sensible gun safety laws to protect school children's right to reach adulthood, or participate in a community COVID vaccination campaign to protect the vulnerable, or donate to a clinic aspiring to fulfill the right to health care for those unable to access such care otherwise. Believing in life and liberty means for ALL.

Mismanagement in sexual assault cases leads to letting rapists go free

by Christine McDonald

FOR IRON COUNTY TODAY

There is a sexual assault taking place right now. Every 68 seconds, someone in America is sexually assaulted. More than 97% of perpetrators get off scot-free.

A major reason is mismanagement of physical evidence. It's time for police work to enter the modern era -- and employ the latest technology for collecting and processing evidence. Otherwise, rapists will continue to go free.

The evidence in a sexual-assault investigation is typically the product of a six-hour physical exam conducted by a medical professional, who searches the victim's body for any material -- like DNA -- that could help identify the perpetrator. The information and material gathered is known as a "sexual assault kit."

As a survivor of sex trafficking and current advocate for victims, I know firsthand how invasive and retraumatizing these exams can be. But we believe that the information collected will help deliver justice.

That faith is often misplaced. In far too many cases, the evidence in sexual assault kits is never used. The federal government estimates a national backlog of more than 200,000 untested kits. Every unprocessed kit represents a crime left unsolved -- and a perpetrator likely to attack again. In Ohio, for example, 22 kits associated with a single rapist remained shelved and untested for years.

When sexual assault kits are tested and used as evidence, another layer of dysfunction can appear. Court cases often require proof of the "chain of custody" for a piece of evidence. Prosecutors need to be able to prove the whereabouts of a rape kit, for example, as it travels from the emergency room to the police, to the crime lab, to the prosecutor, and then to the courts. That evidence may be on the move for years.

The chain of custody is one of the first elements a good defense attorney will scrutinize. If he or she can prove a break in the chain of custody, the evidence is not admissible at trial. And if a defendant challenges the chain of custody, even a minor mistake can lead to an acquittal.

Long backlogs and mismanagement of evidence don't just impact convictions. They also serve as powerful disincentives for women who wish to report sexual assault.

Tech transforming patient experience at Intermountain Healthcare

Hospitals continue to face an uphill battle with labor shortages, inflation, and ongoing impacts of the pandemic. Not to mention, cancellations, no-shows, and no-goes, which aren't just frustrating, but also have a financial toll, costing the US healthcare system billions of dollars each year. As we enter the second half of 2022, profitability may look grim for some providers, but with the introduction of intelligent automation, providers have an opportunity to get back on track financially.

Intermountain Healthcare is one of many providers utilizing cutting edge technology like Notable to give patients back more time with their provider, and reduce the administrative burden healthcare professionals tackle daily.

Through tech-like intelligent automation, Intermountain Healthcare:

- » Reduced patient check in time by 25%
- » Had an 300% increase in co-payment collections
- » Resulted in a 96% patient satisfaction rate . . and more!

Rocky Mountain Power is ready for summer's heat

With the forecast of 2022's near 100-degree days everyone will be feeling the heat of summer. That includes Rocky Mountain Power's electrical system, both from the outside temperatures and the increased customer demand for electricity.

"More electricity is used by our customers during the summer season than at any other time of the year," said Curt Mansfield, Rocky Mountain Power senior vice president of power delivery. "Although we see the demand for electricity reach its highest point during the summer, we are confident about our network's readiness for this summer."

The demand for electricity typically reaches its highest point on a hot summer weekday afternoon. That's the same time power is needed to operate the summertime irrigation systems and the ever-increasing number of air conditioners. "Understanding the climate and customer needs help us provide reliable electricity during this peak season," Mansfield said.

At the end of each summer, Rocky Mountain Power reviews how the electrical system performed, and last year identified 55 projects that were completed prior to the 2022 summer season. Examples of the projects include:

- » Increasing system and distribution capacity
- » Installing new equipment such as switches, voltage regulators, etc.
- » Balancing and reconfiguring the electrical pathways serving customers in specific areas.

During hot weather, Rocky Mountain Power takes steps each day to keep electric service reliable for its customers by monitoring which substations and circuits have the highest use, identifying any potential trouble spots with solutions designed, generally by the following day. Engineers and power system operators keep a close eye on area weather forecasts as well. Electric systems are sensitive to temperature, so the conditions that impact the electric system the most are a series of days when 100-degree highs are coupled with night-time temperatures that do not cool below 70 degrees.

"Customers also can take steps to manage their energy use during the summer peak season," said Mansfield. "We have simple tips, programs and incentives for customers to increase their energy efficiency at home and in the workplace, particularly during the summer months."

To see a full list of energy-saving tips, visit the company's website at www.wattsmart.com. Among the top energy-saving recommendations for summer are:

Set the thermostat as high as comfortable; for example, 78 degrees or higher when at home.

Tune up air conditioners each year and clean or replace filters monthly.

Operate the clothes dryer and dishwasher at night

More electric energy information is available on Rocky Mountain Power's website at: www.rocky-mountainpower.net.

Utah Senate requests public comment on Utah Supreme Court nominee

from Aundrea Peterson

DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF, UTAH SENATE

The Utah Senate Judicial Confirmation Committee is seeking public comment on Jill M. Pohlman, current Court of Appeals Judge, who Gov. Spencer J. Cox appointed to serve as a Justice on the Utah Supreme Court.

Just as the U.S. Senate confirms appointments made by the president, the Utah Senate confirms appointments made by the governor for Utah's highest court. Once the governor has selected a candidate who will best serve the needs of Utahns, the Senate Judiciary Confirmation Committee holds committee hearings in which the appointee offers statements and answer questions from the committee members. After the hearing, the committee votes on whether to recommend confirmation of the appointee by the full Senate.

"It is an immense responsibility to properly vet judicial appointments with the utmost diligence," said Sen. Todd Weiler, chair of the Senate Judicial Confirmation Committee. "I look forward to reviewing Judge Pohlman's experiences, particularly as an appellate judge, to understand more about her judicial philosophy."

The Utah Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review state law. The state's highest court has appellate jurisdiction to hear first-degree and capital felony convictions from the District Courts and judgments of the Court of Appeals by writ of certiorari. Additionally, the Utah Supreme Court reviews formal administrative proceedings of various state commissions, adopts civil and criminal procedure rules and rules of evidence for use in the state courts and governs the practice of law in Utah.

Today, any given sexual assault has just a 31% chance of ever being reported to the police. Why go through an invasive, demeaning, physical exam if the evidence is going to end up in a storage closet -- or if mismanagement by police is going to let the rapist off on a technicality?

There's no excuse for losing track of evidence in 2022. We can look at our phones to determine how many houses away our Amazon packages are. Our financial and health records are online, available on demand. But some police departments still rely on faulty software or even paper files to track evidence. And multiple states, including Massachusetts and Texas, do not require police to keep track of clothing, blood, and urine in a rape kit.

Simple upgrades -- from implementing barcodes and RFID tags, combined with good software -- will bring evidence-collection and management up to an appropriate technological standard nationwide. It will require significant investment by federal and state governments. But newer tools can maximize the impact of those public dollars.

We have the technology to get more perpetrators of sexual assault off the street. We need law enforcement agencies to deploy those tools so victims aren't telling their stories in vain.

Keep your eyes open for these 'Clue' surprises at the Festival

by Liz Armstrong

UTAH SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

Clue, which is playing four times a week this summer at the Utah Shakespeare Festival, is a dynamic, colorful, and hilarious production with an enormous number of props. After all, the set must include a grand hallway, the various rooms in the mansion, secret passageways, and a dizzying number of doors and tricks. Properties Director Benjamin Hohman has given us a sneak peek into some of the fun props used in the show and what to keep our eyes open for.

The Chandelier

First keep your eye out for three-and-a-half foot square crystal chandelier. Originally purchased for The Royal Family which the Festival produced in 1993, the chandelier has been in storage for nearly thirty years.

Hohman and his team have dusted it off, painted it black, and hung it with glittering black crystals. It is now the perfect chandelier for this gloomy and menacing Victorian house.

The Library

The library features a very-hard-to-miss large bookshelf that moves in and out. The books lining the shelves are real, with over 400 donated by the Ye Olde Catholic Thrift Shop in Cedar City. However, because this bookshelf has to move easily, the props team cut them down to less than three inches deep and glued them together. What's that old saying? "Don't judge a book by its cover, or lack thereof."

The Portraits

One section of the stage includes portraits as if it were a wall. If you look closely, these portraits are actually of —scary animals? That's right! Hairless cats, piranhas, you name it. Scenic designer Jo Winiarski hand-sketched, inked, and Photoshopped these unique portraits for the gallery wall.

In honor of our founder, the late Fred C. Adams, there is also a glimpse of him that can be seen onstage. In the hallway, there are four portraits of Fred, depicting him in various roles he played at the Festival. There's Fred as the Major General in The Pirates of Penzance and Fred as Adam in As You Like It. Can you figure out what the other two roles are?

The Rooms

Because there are so many different rooms in Clue, Winiarski had to be creative with the set design. Traveling panels and spinning walls were the solution! For example, there's a kitchen with pots and pans on one wall, and on the other side is the billiard room with pool cues and a dart board.

Each room is color-coordinated too! The lounge is in cool tones, with blues, green, and golds, while the study is old-mansion style, with a gold and red theme. Watch carefully to see all the different designs and details!

The Dining Room Table

The chairs for the dining room scene were originally purchased for A Winter's Tale. They were also in Hamlet, and have now been reupholstered for their third time onstage. These chairs are much more complicated than they may appear. Because the table and chairs are on a platform, the back legs are actually longer than the front so that they can reach the stage floor.

Even more interesting, there is a seventh place setting for Mr. Boddy. But because there's not enough room for

by Mary Anne Andersen

CEDAR CITY ARTS COUNCIL

It was a fortunate confluence of noteworthy events: a startling birthday, a deserved retirement, a wedding anniversary, and Fathers' Day, and we wanted a memorable trip to celebrate it all. But whom to invite and where to go? We decided on the most immediate family—two parents and three grown daughters. If we had gone to the next generation and invited grandchildren, we couldn't have afforded it and we never would have agreed on a place to eat three times a day. So, a nuclear five it was, and the activity of choice? Live theater, of course.

Fourteen years ago LeGrand and I went to the Oregon Shakespeare Festival in Ashland, where we saw four memorable performances and a streaker on roller skates on Main Street. We thought we might get lucky again, so we planned another week there, especially when "The Tempest" and "Once on This Island", two of our family's favorites, were part of the season. We didn't go with the idea of comparing Ashland with Cedar City, necessarily. Okay, yes we did, but not in a mean way. We were totally prepared to be generous.

The Oregon Shakespeare Festival in Ashland, Oregon, was founded in 1935. The sign in front of its outdoor theater says it was the first Elizabethan Theater in America. Its annual attendance is 400,000 (ours in 120,000), annual budget is $32 million (compared to $7 million). Its season is considerably longer than ours of 16 weeks.

Ashland has a population of 21,000 and a charming downtown. There is a creek, and green growing things. Restaurants are cheek by jowl with creekside dining, and more shops than we could get to in two days. But, no one else in the world has Cedar Breaks just forty minutes away!

The 3 theaters are comparable to ours but older, of course. Our beautiful campus is an architectural entity, with groves and gardens and grassy places. We went to a "greenshow" but it was mis-named. It was actually a pre-show rock concert, with performers intent on selling their merch. We didn't go again.

As for the plays, our favorites turned out to be two that were unknown to us. A work of August Wilson, a one-man show telling of his early years in Pittsburgh, was very moving and full of ideas that were startlingly new to us. The same could be said of "Unseen", the west coast premiere of a play about the PTSD episode of a young woman war photographer. Neither of these shows could play in Cedar City, though. Some language and sub-plots would not fly here.

We were disappointed when inadequate understudy preparation forced the musical "...Island" to be performed as a concert rather than a staged production. We were very critical about a major theater company that let itself get into that predicament. But let me say, when a show we wanted to see when we got back home was actually cancelled, I became more forgiving. COVID is still very much a problem.

"The Tempest", which we sat through in the rain, was full of directorial choices that we didn't agree with AT ALL. I hope our USF production will restore my love of this work of magic and love. Oh, and BTW, no streaker in sight. Rats!

New music inspired by Bryce Canyon to debut at free concert

FOR IRON COUNTY TODAY

BRYCE, UTAH — Bryce Canyon National Park invites you to enjoy an evening with Grand Valley State University's New Music Ensemble. A concert featuring an original composition inspired by Bryce Canyon will be held at the North Campground Outdoor Theater on Sunday, July 10th at 7 p.m. This event is free with park admission, open to the public and appropriate for all ages.

With the ensemble's fourth funding award from the National Endowment for the Arts, acclaimed composers were commissioned to create music to be performed within five national parks during a 17-day, 4,500-mile tour. Hannah Boissonneault's "Murmuring", inspired by Bryce Canyon National Park, recreates the floating, ethereal echo of the canyon along with the push and pull of the erosion that formed the park's otherworldly geologic structures. Original music was also composed for Rocky Mountain, Black Canyon of the Gunnison, Canyonlands, and Great Basin national parks.

seven chairs onstage, the props team screwed the back of a chair onto the table to make it look like an entire chair is there. Shhhh, it'll be our little secret.

The Weapons

When each character is given their weapon, they're given very large, easy-to-recognize game pieces at the beginning. However, at the end of the show, they pull their weapons out of their pockets. Because they don't have room in their costumes for the original weapons, there are actually duplicates of each weapon. The original dagger is sixteen inches long, but the dagger at the end is only five inches. It's practically magic!

The Game Pieces

the characters use in one scene is actually a vintage game board! Oh, and there are actual Clue check-off cards from various versions of the game. The characters carry notebooks, which contain the late '70s version of the check-off sheets from the board game.

Other Fun Facts

There's a bar in pretty much each room. Murder calls for drinking? There's even a globe bar, in which the globe spins and contains a full bar set up inside.

Keep your eye out for a full length suit of armor in the study, as well as synthetic red-alligator skin in the library. It's all in the details!

The refrigerator in the play was built from scratch, with the fridge door the only "real part." Over 200 pounds of additional weight had to be added to the back to keep it from tipping over. Yikes!

Of course, we can't give away all of our secrets, but we hope you've enjoyed some of the ones we've shared. To see Clue and appreciate the intricate set design and props, get your tickets by calling 800-PLAYTIX or visit <https://www.bard.org/plays/clue/>.

People In Our Neighborhood: Mayor Garth O. Green

by Liz Armstrong

UTAH SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

This article is the first in a new series the Festival is starting which will feature people in our neighborhoods who share their experiences with the Festival. Some will be new patrons of the Festival, and some like Cedar City Mayor Garth O. Green are life-long fans. We hope you enjoy getting to know your neighbors.

Festival Founder Fred C. Adams used to tell the story of a group of young neighborhood kids who would ride their bicycles to the Festival in its very early years and watch play rehearsals. Among those bicycle-riding, play-watching youngsters was a boy who would go on to become Cedar City's mayor, Garth O. Green.

"I was at the Festival the very first season," Green recalled. "Fred Adams was even my neighbor for a time."

Born and raised in Cedar City and a Southern Utah University alumnus, Green estimated that he has gone to over forty-five seasons of the Utah Shakespeare Festival, not being able to recall many years he hasn't attended. "I don't understand a lot of Shakespeare, but there's something that draws me to it year after year," Green said. "I just sit there and enjoy the acting."

A regular attendee, Green enjoys going to the plays with his wife, his five children, and his grandchildren and noted that he's definitely a "theatre buff."

Having lived in England for about three and a-half years, Green is especially drawn to plays that address English history, like last season's Richard III.

"I love to sit in the very front row, and I remember one time they handed me a towel," Green laughed. "Some of the actors threw water on me, and we were soaked. Now I know that if they hand me a towel, something is going to happen."

In addition to being a theatre lover and devoted

"The idea that you come to a little town in the desert of southern Utah and can sit in a theatre and enjoy [Broadway-quality] performances is amazing."

Garth O. Green, Cedar City Mayor

fan of the plays, Green holds a special place in his heart for the unity and community the Festival helps build.

"There's nothing else that ties people together like the Festival. The Festival is Cedar City. It's us," Green said. "The idea that you come to a little town in the desert of southern Utah and can sit in a theatre and enjoy [Broadway-quality] performances is amazing."

Green recalled that there was a time he and his wife would go all the way to New York to see a play. "Now we go halfway across town," Green said. "I remember I was in New York at a play and I turned to my wife and said, 'They do it better in Cedar City.'"

Green will once again be attending this season and would like to welcome those traveling to see the plays: "Welcome friends from [out of town], I hope you have a wonderful experience and enjoy the mountains, food, theatre, and Cedar City hospitality," Green said.

YES I CAN

This year's food preservation supplies outlook

It seems more recent than a year ago yet here it is time, once again, to address current concerns of home food preservation enthusiasts. A year ago, the questions reaching USU Extension offices across the state/nation focused mainly on supply and demand issues. There was a shortage of canning jars and lids, price gouging when purchasing any type of supplies/equipment, and wide-spread marketing of knock-off brands of canning lids. Anyone fortunate to locate canners or supplies found the prices outlandish. So, has anything improved for canning season 2022? The short answer is “Yes” but let’s take a closer look.

Finding canning jars and lids

Overall, supplies of jars and lids have increased substantially. Most supermarkets, ag supply stores, hardware stores and online businesses are showing “In Stock” of both regular and wide-mouth jars/lids. Shoppers should still use caution online, however.

There are many consumers who stocked up on what were thought to be name-brand items only to use them and discover issues such as buckling or a low rate of sealing. If you fell victim to a site selling 100 lids for under $7.00, for example, you likely found you were taken in by a misleading photo or the ploy of other deplorable marketing practices.

One manufacturer referring to the company as the makers of standard Mason brand jars and lids continues to have products in stores and available online. To their credit, they are responding to consumer complaints and have redesigned their sealing compound in hopes of producing higher sealing rates and avoiding rusting. For their “next generation” of lids information, see: www.purmason.com

Price gouging still happening

While there remains a wide-range in prices of canning equipment such as pressure canners (e.g., a quick browsing today shows a 23-quart canner priced at $161 while another site is asking $365, that is, unless you have an account with the business), the good news is that there are options available, and shopping around may provide a substantial savings to the consumer.

Consider the source

The fact remains that if you are looking to buy canning lids online, you need to do your homework. There are many sites that pop up in your search engine as locations to purchase Ball lids. The manufacturers of Ball®/Kerr® still recommend using businesses they sell to direct to ensure the Dare to dream big – dare to win big!

BUILDING MAIN STREET, NOT WALL STREET

When I visit and think about small and medium sized local communities, I am reminded of the famous line used many times in the movie series, The Hunger Games, that goes, “May the odds be ever in your favor.” At times I feel many of these local communities are doing a very poor job of assuring the odds of winning are in their favor. In fact, many seem to do things that stack the odds against themselves.

As my wife and I were returning from a recent business trip east, we passed through two communities, one small and one medium that appear to be working together to assure the “odds are ever in their favor.”

The first community we traveled through was Keene, New Hampshire. Keene is a very quaint town tucked away in the rolling hills of New Hampshire. The publisher of the newspaper in Keene understands the power of the media working together with their community to make things happen. They have developed a concept that has come to be known as “Radically Local” that resonates throughout the area. In fact, it resonates so well, they have built an entire conference around that theme which draws hundreds of people wanting to learn about being radically local. This is a great example of the media and the community working together to build a greater community while educating the community and others to the value of being truly local for the entire community to grow and thrive, not merely accept survival.

The other example I would like to point out occurred in the mid-sized community of Canton, Ohio. Canton is the home of the Pro Football Hall of Fame. One might ask, how did the football HOF end up in the community of Canton when there are hundreds of larger communities close to NFL cities that might make more sense? The reason is very simple, the leaders of Canton had a vision, or better put, a dream. They wanted to be the city where the HOF was placed and set about in working toward that dream. The leaders worked with the community media company 24/7 to promote, envision and expect success. It was the tireless efforts of the entire community that finally turned these dreams into realities. Those realities today bring tens of millions of dollars to Canton that otherwise may have never been realized without the visions and dreams of a few willing to dream big and not settle for small.

While I point out these two examples, I am sure there are many more like them scattered across our great country. With that said, I can

"First of the Month"

Once upon a time households only had to worry about paying a few bills each month. There was one for the home, the utilities, perhaps a car and of course, groceries. Nowadays we have the same expenses, but now also have monthly charges, payments and bills for the Internet, television (the purchase and the service), streaming services, cell-phones and credit cards and other various loans. For some, we're no longer trying to keep up with the Joneses, that bills no longer conveniently come in such orderly fashion. There are few weeks in this world that are bill-free. Meaning that not only and even depression from feeling like not only are we not getting ahead, but also falling further behind.

Alright, lets switch to a different canvas...a more personal and daily one. Not only do we need to fiscally responsible, but physically responsible. Meaning that we have other bills—our bodies—that need to be paid regularly or the consequences may be worse than a foreclosure or repossession.

If we don't regularly—even daily—pay the bill of eating healthy, eventually our wellbeing begins to weaken. If we snooze on paying our sleeping bills, the cost adds up and can lead to other debts and difficulties in life. Yes, it's the same with the bill of exercise. If we don't take care of our bodies (minds, hearts, souls) life can be a cruel creditor that can bankrupt our bodies and foreclose on our physical comfort and emotional happiness.

What can be done? I'm a firm believer in that it's easier to take an inventory than do an autopsy. In other words, make the time to not only handle your monetary finances, but the finances of your life, also. Just as most of the dread of paying physical bills comes from not knowing if you're going to have enough money, it can be the same with your bodily bills. When we don't eat healthy, or sleep enough, we begin to feel discouraged, even depressed from the weight of the debts and the wondering about how to fix it.

In your inventory, discover where you're spending your time, talents and treasures. Are there some activities that aren't worth the struggling and juggling? Are you physically, emotionally behind, or even bankrupt? Where can you cancel some activities so you can invest in making healthier commitments.

Be honest in your inventory as you investigate your assets and liabilities. Then commit to investing more in yourself, not just at the first of the month, but every day.

Nevertheless, the first of the month brings dread more often than not. However, it's worth noting we don't pay a bill. We either start losing the things we've been trying to pay for, or we start getting late fees that only increase the anxiety

Second marriages and estate planning

by Jeffery J. McKenna

FOR IRON COUNTY TODAY

Love knows no bounds. Many couples have experienced the extent and truth of this common saying. Often, older couples have to cope with adult children who cannot understand why mom or dad wants to remarry. By updating one's estate plan, many concerns related to the marriage can be minimized.

In second marriages later in life, there is often a desire to allow the estate of the first spouse to die to be available for a surviving spouse during his or her life. However, the deceased spouse often wants the estate to ultimately be distributed to his or her children upon the surviving spouse's death.

The best way to ensure that one's assets are available for a surviving spouse but ultimately distributed to one's children from a prior marriage is through the use of a trust. The trust can be created within a will (this is called a testamentary trust) or it can be created within a living trust (this is a trust created while one is alive).

"Often, older couples have to cope with adult children who cannot understand why mom or dad wants to remarry. By updating one's estate plan, many concerns related to the marriage can be minimized."

Significantly, the trust maker would set forth the terms of the trust according to his or her wishes, and would select the trustee (or trustees) to manage the trust. Upon the death of the trust maker, the trustee would then manage the trust assets subject to those specified wishes of the trust maker.

For couples in a second marriage, it is often important to sign a marital agreement that states each spouse can dispose of his or her estate as desired. If such a document is not signed, a surviving spouse could legally attempt to "override" the estate plan of the deceased spouse.

Often, a given state's law will provide that a surviving spouse can "elect against the will." This means that a surviving spouse is entitled to a spousal share as specified by statute despite the fact that the will may provide differently.

Proper estate planning in these circumstances can be a great blessing. It can relieve significant concerns of adult children when a parent remarries later in life, and it can bring peace of mind to the parent, knowing that he or she has succeeded in protecting the financial legacy of the children.

mom's CORNER(ED)

by Weslie Stratton
CONTRIBUTOR

Flashback to six years ago: my husband and I are eating dinner at a Cafe Rio with our one-month-old first child in a car seat. I remember seeing another couple there with a toddler who was contently watching a show on a phone while his parents ate their meal.

I piously judged them for using screentime during dinner and told myself I would never do that with my own children.

Fast forward two years: we're at a Texas Roadhouse with our one-month-old second child and two-year-old first. Our oldest is over stimulated by the neon lights, loud music and boisterous laughter. His head is on a swivel, he's sliding utensils across the table, babbling too loudly and trying to escape.

We just want to enjoy a night out!

A thought crosses my mind and I immediately push it aside. It refuses to be ignored. It would be so simple. Maybe just this one time. Just until our meal arrives.

I swallow my pride and ask my husband, "Should we let him watch a show for just a few minutes?" Thirty seconds later we're able to have a full conversation and relax at our table all while I'm sending telepathic apologies to the couple at Cafe Rio.

Have you ever received naive advice from a childless couple? Have you ever gotten the evil eye from a passerby at the grocery store who overheard your hissed threat at your crying kid in the cart? Have you ever been told to just enjoy your children because they grow up too fast after expressing how tired you are?

I'm here to cut you some slack! Parenting does not equal perfection. We're only human and no two kids are the same!

While our kids are learning to crawl, talk, share, manage school work and drive, we are learning right along with them.

We're learning how to manage meltdowns, speak in code, walk on eggshells and love unconditionally. And just when we think we're getting the hang of this parenting thing, our kids grow up a little bit and present new challenges to maneuver.

I have a sign hanging in my kitchen that gives 10 tips for a happier home. These are pointers that I review regularly to help me keep my cool, like

"Pick your battles" and "Follow a predictable routine." My favorite tip is number 10. It reads: Breathe; no one is perfect and tomorrow is a new day.

Truth! Remember that your family is unique and no one knows them like you do. So next time someone watches you pick up a cheeseburger off the parking lot asphalt and hand it back to your expectant toddler, just smile and wave. I promise they have done something equivalent in their family.

Advance directives help all ages plan for future healthcare decisions

from Becki Bronson

CEDAR CITY HOSPITAL

During the COVID-19 pandemic, many were faced with serious illness or a medical emergency that required vital decisions about their medical care, and sometimes those decisions couldn't be made by the patient themselves. This has brought more awareness to the need for making an advance directive.

Intermountain Healthcare and other Utah health systems and healthcare associations have come together to encourage people to make an advance directive, or to discuss their wishes about future healthcare decisions and put them in writing. This helps loved ones, providers and facilities be aware of and respect those wishes, whatever they may be. People can also specify about what life-sustaining treatments they do or do not wish to have.

"During a medical emergency or serious illness, you may not be able to make healthcare decisions for yourself. Designating a trusted healthcare agent who is aware of your wishes means you'll have an advocate who can help speak on your behalf," said Dr. Dominic Moore, a pediatric palliative care physician, with University of Utah Health and medical director of palliative care at Intermountain Healthcare, who works with patients with serious illnesses.

"Advance directives are important not just for older adults, but for younger people as well, and even children, especially if they have a chronic condition. These are difficult, but very important conversations to have," he added.

Dr. Moore says it's a good idea to update or change advance directives annually, or if one of the "four D's" occurs:

DIAGNOSIS – you receive a serious diagnosis

DETERIORATION – your health is declining

DIVORCE

DEATH of your designated healthcare agent

He reminds people it's important to keep all the contact information for yourself and your healthcare agent up to date and check the legal requirements to complete the paperwork in the state where you live.

If you're over 18, it's a good idea to have an advance directive in place, since a sudden injury or illness might leave a person unable to make decisions for themselves. Once an advance directive is made it should be shared with loved ones, healthcare providers and the hospital. Forms can be completed online, on paper, at home or in the doctor's office or hospital.

At Intermountain facilities, the Advance Directive and POLST forms can be saved into the patient's electronic medical record, so various Intermountain providers have access to them, so a patient's wishes can be known and updated. The forms can also be accessed and updated by patients in Intermountain's My Health+ app.

"Many patients wish they'd done advance care planning earlier. It's always too early, until it's too late," he added.

For more information about advance directives, or for the forms needed for one, visit intermountainhealthcare.org/directive.

Proud puppy momma Nala and her lovely litter.

Doberman Pinscher gives birth to 14 pups

You've heard of triplets, quadruplets, sextuplets, maybe even octuplets and nonuplets but have you ever heard of quattuordecimlet's? In what may be a new record for the State of Utah and Iron County, a Doberman Pinscher by the name of Nala gave birth to 14 beautiful puppies on June 21. "All came out healthy and happy. She's a great mama and being her assistant has been so rewarding and just a joy to take part in," says her owner Chelsea Neilson of Parowan, Utah.

also confidently say one thing. Many communities will never experience these types of dreams coming true because they think small and fail to dream big. You will never make a game-winning shot if you don't take it. I am convinced that one of the biggest obstacles for most communities is the simple fact that they think too small. They are willing to settle for mild successes obtained on the road-most-traveled because they are safe roads with few obstacles in the way. It is those leaders willing to traverse the road-less-traveled, knowing that obstacles will be faced, that win the big prize.

My challenge to any community, regardless of size is to dream big, expect to win and play as if you will win. The only downside to dreaming big is you may not always win, but you will be battle hardened to keep moving forward on the next big idea. Be the community in the arena. Be the community that doesn't dwell on their current negative conditions but keeps plowing ahead to change those conditions. Always strive for perfection, knowing that perfection is nearly impossible to attain. But understand in your quest for perfection, there is nothing wrong with falling short and settling for greatness – that is the trick to winning.

Canning vs. other forms of food preservation

Home canning has been a tradition for many families—especially those with rural ties or have garden produce/fruit to preserve. It is a wonderful way to have ownership of whether you will add salt or sugar or change spices. You are also in charge of quality control and know exactly what the contents are inside the jars—usually without added dyes or preservatives.

Even though home canning (pressure or water-bath) is a widespread practice, please keep in mind there are other options to preserving the harvest from your garden or from of a vender at the local Farmer's Market.

» Many foods are excellent when blanched/pre-treated and then frozen. Prepared entrées or desserts work well, too. Most foods should be used within 12 months but it is a great option for helping food maintain quality. Thawing and heating are straight forward.

“The good news is that there are options available, and shopping around may provide a substantial savings to the consumer.”

» Dehydrating provides lightweight, portable foods. While each batch of dehydrated food may be somewhat small, the dehydrator used may be purchased for less than $100 to over $300 depending on the number of functions it performs.

» Let's not forget about freeze drying. Whether this is a fad or a processing method that is here to stay, it is fascinating to have this available for home food preservation. Check with family, neighbors or your local USU Extension office to see if you could experiment with a batch of food.

May you take advantage of any or all methods for preserving foods for longer-term storage. It may save time and money and provide the assurance you have food on-hand in case of an emergency.

John Voges Gurney

John Voges Gurney had an adventurous life. He was born May 28, 1937, in California to loving parents; Harlan “Bud” Gurney and Helen Voges. His mother passed away when he was 2 years old. His Aunt Hilda married his father and raised him and his siblings. He grew up in Woodland Hills, California on a large ranch. He has 4 siblings; 1 brother and 3 sisters; Jerry, Helen, Harlan and Hilda.

He loved challenges, flying, hiking, biking and swimming. But his greatest love was his wife, Doris Laurene.

His heart broke when she passed away last year. He is survived by his daughter Patricia and son-in-law Devin Fulton. His other daughter, Lisa Mueller, passed away in 2003.

Lisa's husband is John Mueller and he was fortunate to find a new wife, Alison. His grandchildren are Natasha, Carla, Skylor, Zion, Tyrone, Ethan, Nathan, Emma, Dillon, Emily and Mary. They have multiple extra children, who they always claimed as their own. They always accepted and embraced many and had unconditional love for all.

His enthusiasm for adventure will always be part of all of us. He always lived every day, like there was no tomorrow. He made every day special. One of the hardest things in his life was staying home and doing nothing. He always packed up to go somewhere until he traveled to his last destination.

We are forever grateful for his love, kindness, willingness to give and help others. It was easy finding pictures of him, he went everywhere with our family. He will be missed, but we will carry Papa and Nana's memory in our future adventures.

Warren R. “Bud” Green

Warren R. “Bud” Green passed away at his home on June 28, 2022. He was 83 years old. Bud was born on Oct 29, 1938, in Cedar City, Utah, to Warren Albert and Norma Perry Green. He spent most of his childhood with his grandma and grandpa Perry, whom he dearly loved and admired.

He graduated from Cedar High and was married shortly after to Lynda Mitchell. Together they had four children. They later divorced.

Bud worked several jobs early on including the Utah International Iron Mines where he operated heavy equipment and worked as an electrician's helper. Later he worked for UDOT as a surveyor and drafter. Volunteered with the Iron County Jeep Patrol for several years. He also owned and operated a gas station on Main Street and a Golf Driving Range on North Main. He then started his own business, “Buds Sports Sales.” He sold motorcycles, snowmobiles and ATV's.

Bud built a Snowmobile from the ground up based off a picture he had seen in a magazine. He was the first person to start a snowmobile business in Southern Utah. While in this business, he built motocross tracks, oval snowmobile racetracks and trials bike completion courses and sponsored these events giving many the opportunity to participate and compete. This was his career most of his life until sold his business. Bud being Bud he could not just relax so he started another business by purchasing a backhoe and dump truck fulfilling his childhood dream to play in the dirt. He was proud of the businesses he built and always did quality work. He made many lifelong friendships along the way. He built a very large authentic log cabin at Navajo Lake with help from his family. He also built his own home for him and his second wife, Connie Sue. They later divorced.

Later in life, Bud came to find his Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. He and Connie had the opportunity to travel to Jerusalem; an opportunity in life he cherished and spoke about often.

Dad enjoyed many outdoor activities but one of his real passions was water skiing and he was a pro at it! Dad loved his family and attended the majority of family events, ballgames and projects. Always willing to offer his help and support. Dad would always pitch in and help with home or remodel projects but refused to let you help him with his chores. He always felt he could get it done himself. He was very self-sufficient and independent and very stubborn! Until these last couple of months, dad never missed giving a birthday and Christmas card with a little cash in it to everyone in his family even the newborn babies.

Dad loved cool cars, cool hair and had both as a teenager and as a young adult. He had to give up the cool cars when life got busy and money went in other directions. He always kept his hair trimmed and nice. He would cut his own hair using two mirrors and was very precise about it.

Bud is survived by his children Mark, Todd (Marilyn), Debby (Lief) Condie, and Bret; 7 grandchildren; 11 great-grandchildren; his sister Karen Haller; his brother Rick; and his sister-in-law Tamara (Tomi) Green. His parents and brother Fred preceded him in death. Graveside service was held Tuesday, July 5, 2022, at the Cedar City Utah Cemetery. The family wishes to thank the hospice caregivers who have helped Dad through this hard part of his life. Condolences may be shared at mcmillanmortuary.com.

"HIS HAND IN MINE"

How Far Can You See?

by L. Brent Jones

*The distance we're allowed to see
Depends on where we stand.
We must climb up to the higher ground
To see the view that God has planned.*

*For He set us here among the trees,
With just glimpses of the sun.
To seek its rays we must look up,
And our journey's just begun.*

*We move ourselves above the trees
By following His light.
And now our view's expanded
With a forest in our sight.*

*Ahead the rocks still block our view,
So we continue on our climb.
And soon those rocks are conquered
And the sun shines all the time.*

*Then the mountains rise to block the sun.
Another challenge to overcome.
For our goal is to now reach the top
And see where we came from.*

*Then from the top we look around
And the view we see expands.
For more mountains lie ahead of us.
We hold progress in our hands.*

*For what we see can be achieved.
Success is ours to see.
As new mountaintops come into view,
We can see eternity.*

*For the mountains go forever.
At their tops we see God's face.
And our journey's gain experience
As His precepts we embrace.*

*There is always more before us.
Challenges help us grow.
With each one He guides us to the next,
For there's so much more to know.*

*We must always move to higher ground,
A never ending quest.
For we'll never see what God can see,
Until we pass this earthly test.*

"WATER" (MATT BROUWER)

When was the last time you were physically thirsty? Not just the "I could sure use a glass of water" but real thirst, where you begin to feel anxiety that if you don't get some hydration soon, bad things might happen. When you're that thirsty, you can't think of anything else. It's like not being able to breathe—nothing else matters but getting that next breath, or in this case, that next drink of life-saving liquid.

Do you remember how it felt to finally get that desired drink? That water was the most precious gift on the planet. Perhaps you've also experienced moments where you finally find a water fountain (or a well) only to realize that it's been shut off (or dried up)? Maybe you finally come to a refreshing river, only to discover that it's muddy water?

When was the last time you were spiritually thirsty, or experiencing a drought of divinity in your life? When was the last time you couldn't wait to pray for rain (physically and spiritually), or go to the wells of wisdom (Holy Scriptures) to read an inspiring verse, or were in desperate need of the heavenly hydration that comes only from the Fountain of living water (Isaiah 49:10)?

Sometimes in life we experience both physical and spiritual thirst, even droughts and dehydration. We can get stranded in both temporal and spiritual deserts. That is why the Lord not only reminds, but invites each of us to drink freely and fully from His fountain of living waters (John 4:13-14). And then not only are we filled, but we then also become living, flowing wells (John 7:37-39), with the responsibility to help Him rehydrate the world with the precious and soul-sustaining water He has mercifully, freely given unto us.

This world needs more such wells and water. Because it is both disconcerting and dehydrating to see how some in the world have forsaken the Fountain of living waters, even trying to create their own wells and imitation hydration (Jeremiah 2:11-13). Others (like the Philistines trying to destroy Abraham's descendants) seek to pollute, or plug up the wells as to keep God's children (each of us) from finding them and receiving the refreshing, cleansing and healing waters within (Genesis 26).

What wells are you whetting your spiritual whistle with today? Who do you know that is spiritually dehydrated and needs the refreshing and living waters of life—peace, patience, forgiveness, hope, self-worth and love? Yes, sometimes we might feel like we're in a dry and weary land and have to dig deeper to get to the good stuff, but it's there!

Today, is there anything spiritually dehydrating you?

Are there things that need to be removed, or repaired, to help the Living Waters flow through your mind and heart? Is there anything polluting, plugging, or preventing you from drinking freely from the well of Living Water? Come unto Christ and He will help you receive the precious gift of Water. (Revelation 22:17).

What's next for Utah, BYU with UCLA/USC move to Big Ten?

Last Thursday seemed like any other day. Nothing ordinary happening for the last day of June until a shift of Herculean proportions rocked the college football world.

USC and UCLA are moving to the Big Ten, effective in 2024. You read this correctly. The Trojans and the Bruins are packing up and moving to a conference where the school closest to them (Nebraska) is a full two time zones away from Los Angeles. In total, nine of the 14 schools that make up the current Big "Ten" are in the Eastern time zone, three hours from home.

It's a move that makes as much geographic sense as Stuart Little needing a road map to find his cheese. Alas, geography isn't the first consideration for this move, but the schedule adjustments will make fans stand up and take notice.

Take this year's schedule. Among the game times that are locked in for 2022, USC already has two at home that start after dark – at 7:30 p.m. Pacific (10:30 Eastern) against Fresno State on Sept. 17 and a 6:30 Pacific/9:30 Eastern kickoff against Colorado on Nov. 11.

UCLA has a confirmed 7:30 p.m. home game on its schedule against Washington on Sept. 30. Both schools will likely have other games in similar after-dark starts, but won't be finalized until closer to each game day.

Once the move is made, both schools will play games that are seen by a lot more of the country, mainly because the fans will be awake enough to enjoy them.

The money will be greater, and that helps with better competition. Since the College Football Playoff came into being in 2014, only Oregon (2014) and Washington (2016) have earned spots in the final four. By contrast, the Big Ten has missed the playoff twice in eight years (2017, 2018).

With the news of this blow-the-doors-off move, a legitimate question needs answering. What happens to the Rose Bowl?

Sure, the game used to be the Big Ten and Pac-8/10/12 champions colliding on New Year's Day in Pasadena, Calif. A national title wasn't always in the offing for the winner, but we've been surprised before. Michigan got a share of the title in 1997 when it beat Washington State in that year's game and the first real change in the tradition came in 2002. It was the first time we had a BCS National Championship and the first Rose Bowl since 1946 that didn't involve the Big Ten or Pac-12 champion. Final score: Miami (Fla.) 34, Nebraska 14.

In the 20 years since, at least one team from each conference played at the Rose Bowl, and both usually ended up there, anyway. Of course, the run culminated this year with Utah's memorable effort against Ohio State that ended in a 48-45 loss.

But what happens to the Utes now? No moves have been officially announced, but the rumor mill is strong the school will reunite with BYU as a Big 12 member with the departure of Texas and Oklahoma for the Southeastern Conference.

The changes are coming like the cars in a certain movie. Too fast, too furious, and definitely not easy to keep up with them. We'll do our best in the days ahead.

–As of July 1, Southern Utah is now officially a member of the Western Athletic Conference. The regular season begins with St. Thomas, a new Division I program out of St. Paul, Minn., on Sept. 3, and the first football game that counts in the T-Birds' new home happens Sept. 24 when they play Utah Tech at Eccles Coliseum in a 6 p.m. kickoff.

With a new head coach in DeLane Fitzgerald leading the team, things can only get better – at least there's hope – from the 6-34 stretch SUU has struggled through since its FCS second-round playoff loss in 2017.

Game on. It's time to get to work.

This little fish with strong, powerful jaws grows to be up to 10 inches in length.

The humuhumunukunukuāpua'a (sometimes just called humuhumu for short) is known for its bright, beautiful coloration. It is a kind of tropical triggerfish. Many people don't know that reef triggerfish like humuhumu can change colors!

Use the math code to color the humuhumu.

Some time ago, an odd photo appeared on the internet that showed a gray triggerfish with human-like teeth.

The strange photo was shared thousands of times all around the world. People were amazed that a fish could have teeth that look like ours.

But the photo was fake, likely created by someone who wanted to play a joke on a lot of people. It was a pretty harmless prank, but a reminder that you can't always believe everything you see online.
